Cision is a public relations software developer that evolved out of an old magazine clipping service – a classic reinvention of an organization that figured out how to evolve and move on while competitors were wringing their hands. Having officed in the same space for over 20 years, Cision's leadership saw their office relocation as an opportunity to not only reframe the organization, but also capture their core values: work passionately, be accountable, communicate openly, drive innovation, and value people
